Cell Aquaculture is taking barra overseas

Local firm exports barra

by LETITIA SIMON

FISH farmer Cell Aquaculture is taking Australia's famous barramundi overseas to Europe, North America and Asia.

Following the release of its prospectus in this month, the Hamilton Hill based company is having a crack at floating on the Australian Stock Exchange.

Company chair Lee Boyd said the company plans to produce and supply proprietary technology, such as their modular system Eco-Cell, and ship disease free baby fish stocks overseas from their planned hatchery.

Joint venture arrangements have already been put in place in the Netherlands, Bombay and on both the east and west coasts of the USA.
