

Float hopeful Cell Aquaculture has learnt pretty quickly how to whet the appetite of the media and investment community — free food. Cell Aqua impressed last week, serving up barramundi at the South Perth restaurant of the company's food adviser Warren Mead. When lunch orders were being taken inventor and managing director Perry Leach, father of former Docker Quenton, quipped to a HOTT operative "I suppose I better have fish". Mind you, with the float process in full swing he's probably eating the stuff every day and relishes the chance for some red meat.
